PASTOR'S THOUGHTS

I have been thinking about this, the end of my Transitional Interim with you and what it has been like. It drew me to something Roy Oswald, a leader at the Alban Institute, relates from his boyhood in rural Canada. As a young boy, Roy and his two older brothers often took a shortcut to school through an enormous thistle patch. In some places the prickly patches were 50 to 100 feet wide. The boys rarely wore shoes to school in the summertime, hence their dilemma: how to cross the thistle patch in bare feet. The option of taking the long way around and avoiding the thistles was quickly overruled. The only other option was to back up and run as fast as possible through the narrowest spot. Oswald recalls "running full speed in bare feet across 20 feet of prickly thistles, yelping in pain all the way. When the three of us reached the black soil on the other side, we would immediately hit the dirt and start pulling out the few thistle ends that stuck in our feet."

When we face crucial changes in our lives, like Oswald, we often wish we could have gone through the transitions as quickly and as painlessly as possible. I know when I first started my ministry here there were some of you who couldn't imagine why I would be coming here to start a yearlong transitional ministry. After 8 previous transitional interims I was very used to hearing this, yet I knew there was work that needed to be done so that Kent would be ready for the prompting of the Spirit in calling a new pastor. Some of it is painful but, like all endings, is fully necessary. And I am grateful for your going through the 5 developmental stages to get us where we now are. The one thing I didn't expect was it would take the Holy Spirit 2 and 2/3rds years to bring this about. But here we are and it is a time of mixed feelings for me as I embrace the joy of a new pastor for Kent beginning next week and a bit of sadness in bringing this special time we have had together and the things we have positively gone through and did together to a close.

In other words, it is time for closure, and to "Say Goodbye in order to Say Hello." Usually I would write a sermon about "Not an end but a Bend in the road." For one thing is certain: ministry will continue here at Kent by beginning a new chapter with Pastor Ed's leadership

But I do want to say, as I have so often, I give thanks to God for each of you and the ministry we have shared together. I am grateful for the church council and the various committees and the ministries here for continuing the caring and sharing Kent is known for. Jan and I have often talked how wonderful it is to be part of such a caring congregation. But, as many of you know, with Pastor Ed's gracious consent Jan and I will continue our membership here. The good news for us is that we will not have to leave Kent but be able to give and support all that happens here but in new and different ways. So, thanks Ed.

But to assist this transition I will be worshiping at different congregations in the next couple of months. While I'm gone, I know that you will welcome and embrace Pastor Ed as your new Pastor because that is who you are.

So, I end my ministry with a thankful heart and the farewell that is open ended: “May God be with you till we meet again.”

Pastor Carl
